BOSTON COBRESPONDENCE.

BOSTON, May 23, 1882, Under the head "Wanted," in one of the daily papers, was, among a good many other queer things, this: "The care of a furnished house during the summer by two young lady students. Undoubted references furnished. Address, etc." Now in what great city anywhere else out of Utopia could that advertisement have appeared without provoking more than suspicion as to the good faith, right intention and respectability of the advertisers? Here, if the casual reader gave it a thought, it was only "What a bright notion! what an innocent lark that might be for two nice girls!" and I dare say some perplexed housekeeper, whose vision of perfect summer rest at Gloucester, Nantaeket, or in a cliff cottage at Newport, has been obscured by a sort of silhouette procession projected across it of the Irish clan likely to be rioting amongst the household gods of the luxurious city home left nominally in Bridget's or Ellen's charge, superb place, doors opening and shutting upon him, people whispering about him, till, in "no slight discomfort," he arrived the throne-room. "An imposing lady in black, with flowing drapery, came quickly forward to greet me. It was her Majesty, Queen Victoria. She extended her hand, and I offered to take it."

"What!" I interrupted; "did you not bend and offer to kiss it?"

"No," said he, timidly; "I was not then familiar or acquainted with court etiquette as I am now. She offered me her what have horrified her."

"Why," said I, "she is the most inextorably exigeante of all sovereigns. You must have horrified her."

"I presume I did," said he, simply. "Now I think of it, she was disconcerted, I suppose for that reason, but she rallied graciously and asked me about America and myself."

It has been whispered of late years that her Majesty is shy of receiving Americans. Has any other American, distinguished or otherwise, endeavored to shake her Majes. F other queer things, this : "The care of a

"Two Girls," she might call it, or "Playing with Fire!" Let us hope, in dismissing them to their summer romance—for be sure that's what they'll make of it if they're worth their salt—that they're girls of an old-fashioned sort, for whom nerves have never been invented, and after days filled with leaving and light housekeeping they with learning and light housekeeping, they may go soundly to sleep unperturbed by any necessity to look under all the beds,

Men choose one of the two latter modes. Women generally get breakfast and tea in their rooms with the help of a grate fire, or a coal-oil or gas stove, and dine at a restaurant. A glance at the grocers' windows and counters shows the provision made for this mode of life divorced from kitchen conveniences. Cooked and potted meats and fish, cheeses of all kinds, fruits preserved in every possible manner, a he-wildering variety of the ready to hand kind meet the glance. Aside from dish-washing it is, short of hotel life, the most kind meet the glance. Aside from dishwahing it is, short of hotel life, the most attractive fashion of existence for a soltaire in the city that we have in America. It may be more economical than boarding for one obliged to "cultivate literature (or anything else) on a little oatmeal," but ordinarily freedom is its chief intent.

SPEAKING OF GIRL STUDENTS,
Have I ever referred to those of what may be called the Harvard Annex? About twenty girls passed the Harvard local examinations in 1879. The number was doubled in 1880, and increases steadily. They study in Harvard's shadow, but it is a fostering shadow, and it looks only a question of time before all the college doors will open widely to welcome them. So far the taste of the female students here has preferred ancient languages, history, political economy, modern languages and mathematics. Very few have chosen courses in music or the fine arts. Some course in m courses in music or the fine arts. Some come for pure love of learning, some to perfect themselves in specialties for a higher or some special position. When girl students are admitted here as freely as their brothers, and may, like them, take their brothers, and may, like them, take their degree of course the full round of the car to which the engine was attached had its connection with the little brass truck that ran on the wires. The Call says it worked to a charm. At any vertisements of well-kept farms. their brothers, and may, like them, take their degree, of course the full round of studies will be most popular. No house yet has been built for the reception of female students; but when it is, the builders will have the examples of Vassar, Newnham and Girton to stimulate them into a remembrance of closets. Mr. Vassar was astonished that two hooks should not be ample for a girl's wardrobe needs, and both at Newnham and Girton a few and both at Newnham and Girton a few hooks in the corner, with a curtain hang-ing over them, represent the closets dear to a woman's heart. Yet Girton, built to house twenty students, cost $110,000, and is supposed to be quite luxurious in that it gives to every student a sitting and a sleeping-room.

Several lives of Longfellow are already in the market. Mr. Underwood's is the in the market. Mr. Underwood's is the authorized one, and is very admirably done—tasteful, clear, candid, gentle—the author hidden quite behind his subject. One feels that Longfellow could have found only pleasure in this presentment of himself and his work. Mr. Underwood tells us what he would not miss in his account of how he came to prepare the biography. More than a year ago he had written a sketch of Lowell, which, in the proofs, he submitted to Longfollow's revision as Lowell's intimate friend. The poet liked the submitted to Longfollow's revision as Lowell's intimate friend. The poet liked the sketch of the brother poet, and "with the simple frankness of Priscilla in his Puritan romance, intimated that he would be pleased to have one written of himself in a similar spirit." Probably there will be later a fuller life, showing the poet in other relations, and including his correspondence; but the present one contains all essential facts. Mr. Underwood, who was the projector and first editor of the Atlantic Monthly, and who knew personally all its earlier contributors, gives a very graphic earlier contributors, gives a very graphic picture of literature in American when Longfellow began to write—between fifty the health, but certain to look ugly. It is Longfellow began to write—between my and sixty years ago. "Hawthorne, who was Longfellow's college classmate, published his first volume later, in 1837, and lished his first volume later, in 1837, and or a statue, or has any 'eye' for grace in or has est man of letters in America.'" Oblivion for the most part, says Mr. Underwood, has settled down upon the literature (American) held in honor fifty years ago, "and to look back upon Griswold's 'Poets" "and to look back upon Griswold's 'Poets and Poetry of America' is like taking a distant view of Mount Auburn Cemetery

It has been whispered of late years that her Majesty is shy of receiving Americans.

Has any other American, distinguished or otherwise, endeavored to shake her Majesty's royal hand?

THE TRAIN TELEGRAPH-A NEW AND NOVEL INVENTION. Barbara Press, has invented "a certain method of preventing railroad collisions." Two ordinary telegraph wires are used. Wheels or electric brushes attached to the wheels or electric brushes attached to the pation or other, occupying one's own beloved bed at home, smoking his short, black pipe in that dearest household shrine, the library, or capering in an uncouth jig in a servants' ball given in one's drawing room. instrument in the car, and returning it to the other wire, along which it passes until its destination is reached, when it is connected with a ground wire, and completes the circuit through the earth. The same current is made to pass through several trains by a simple method of switching at stations. It enables dispatchers to have control of every train at each moment of its progress, and approaching trains are constantly advised of the position of each. So, too, when one train is following another. By this method, too, accidents can be reported the moment they happen, and messages be received and sent for passengers while the train is in motion. It is claimed that trains can be run on better time, as may go soundly to sleep unperturbed any necessity to look under all the beds, into every crevice wherein a mouse could barely slide, to punch all the garments hanging in the wardrobes, or to explain to themselves all the mysterious noises that infest night and a big, empty house. Tis beauteous night; the stars look brightly down Upon the earth, decked in her robe of snow. No light gleams at the window, save my own, Which gives its cheer to midnight and to me. And now, with noiseless step, sweet memory comes and leads me gently through her twilight realms. What pot's tuneful lyre has ever sung, Or delicate pen e'er portrayed,
The enchanted, shadowy land where memory dwells It has its valleys, cheerless, lone and drear, Dark-haded by the mournful cypress tree; And yet its sunlit mountain tops are bathed. In heaven's own blue. Upon its craggy cliffs, Robed in the distant light of dreemy years, Are clustered joys serene of other days, Upon its gentle, sloping hillsides bend. The weeping willows o'er the sacred dust. Of dear departed ones; and yet in that land, Where'er our footsteps fall upon the shore, They that were sleeping rise from out the dust. Of death's long, silent years, and round us stand As erst they did before the prison tomb. Receiving their clay within its voiceless halls. The heavens that bend above that land are hung With clouds of various hues. Some dark and chill Surcharged with sorrow, cast with somber shade Upon the suony, joyous land below.

Others are floating through the dreamy air, White as the falling snow, their margins tinged With gold and erimsoned hues; their shadows fall Upon the flowery meads and sunny slopes, Soft as the shadow of an angel's wing.

An old Republican politician to-day said he was of the opinion that Arthur, if he ever entertained a purpose of seeking the nomination for a second term, had abandoned it altogether; that he would henceforth administer the Presidential office wholly without reference to a second term, keeping in view always two things—the patriotic and faithful discharge of its high duties and responsibilities, and that his political friends are rewarded, as far as possible, for their fidelity to him personally and to the Republican party.

WASHINGTON, June 6th.—This morning, as Reed, counsel for Guiteau, appeared before Judge Wylie, of the Criminal Court, and asked to have the record corrected as to the counts in the indictment alleging that the late President died in the District of Columbia, he stated that he has other motions in view which recorditated a clean record. bia, he stated that he has other motions in view, which necessitated a clean record. Judge Wylie denied the motion. He did not question the power of the Court to correct its records, but it was not for him, sitting in another term and having no personal knowledge of the record, to undertake to amend it. The general verdict was based upon good counts in the indictment, the Court, in passing sentence, shutting its eyes to the vicious counts.

Washington, June 6.h.—Guiteau received with outward composure the announcement of the failure of the last effort of his counsel to secure a rehearing of his case. He proceeded to denounce the Court in bank as cowards and cranks, and said God has revealed to him that he was to be taken care of. God, he said, works through human agencies.

Monday morning Simon Rater, a man who had been tried and convicted of murder in the st degree, was brought into Department Two of the Superior Court of Sacramento ounty to receive his death sentence. Before the day fixed for his execution was announced he was asked by Judge Denson if he had anything to say why the sentence should not be pronounced. Katen grose from his seat, and n a strong, clear tone of voice, but in very broken English, addressed the Court, in the presence of 300 spectators, for several min-utes. Simon Raten was to be sentenced to utes. Simon Raten was to be seardened to be hanged; he had a right to be heard, and in his feeble way he tried to show some mitigating circurustances in connection with the nurder of James Lansing. A reporter of the RECORD UMON was present to report the proceedings of the Court, which was done impartially. Raten made grave charges against certain city officers, and they were given to the public through the columns of this paper as they fell from the fips of the man who will explain the scrime on the gallows on Wednesday, July 26, 1882. It seems, from a report published last evening, that "the officers of the Police Court yesterday morning were justly indignant because the RECORD-UNION made a report of the speech of the condemned criminal." The RECORD-UNION made a report of the speech of the condemned criminal. "The RECORD-UNION made a report of the speech of the condemned riminal." The RECORD-UNION made a report of the speech of the proceedings to its readers. That this was done all who were present will admit. As to the truth or falsity of Raten's statement this paper offered no opinion. That his statement is true is believed by many. The action of the city officers in the Police Court yesterday morning in denouncing this unfortunate man, who is doomed to die in a few short hours, as a falsifier, and their condemnation of a paper for printing to the world his last defense for life is, to say the least, uncalled for. The only question ariding is, Did Raten make the statemente attributed to him? It is not decided that he did, and if he did, the report was correct, proper, warranted and will stand. Any denial the officers may have to make of the statements made by Raten belongs to them of right, but the assumption of ill-usage at the hands of this journal because the defensive statement of a prisoner about to receive his death sentence is reported, is a harmless kind of high dudgeon which the parties may indulige to the full bent of their tastes.

Seventh—That a special effort be made to get at least one hundred ladies and their escorts on horseback to join in the procession. This, the Committee think, can be done readily by extending the invitations to ladies in the country as well as the city.

Eighth—That at least five allegorical cars be provided for the procession.

Ninth—That an adult lady and gentleman be requested to represent General and Martha Washington in the procession in appropriate costume, and that a body guard of soldiers in Continental uniform be provided for them.

Tenth—That the several States and Territories of the Union be represented in the procession by five boys, four to form a square, with the fifth in the center bearing a banner with a device representing a State or Territory; the boys forming the square carrying a small flag or branch in one hand, and in the other holding a ribbon draped from the banner.

The Democrats claim that the Legislature's in doubt, but concede George's election and most of the Republican State ticket.

ISECOND DISPATCH.1 PORTLAND, June 6th.—George is certainly elected by a majority of not less than 2,000. The Republicans claim the entire State ticket by majorities ranging from 700 to 1,800. The Democrats concade the State to the Republicans by small majorities. The entire Multnomah county Republican ticket is elected. The smallest majority will not be less than 300. The lines to Eastern Oregon have been down for two days, and not a precinct east of the mountains has been heard from. The Legislature is doubtful. The Republicans, on account of local dissensions, lose a Senator and one Representative in Clackamas, two Representatives in Wash-

Sunday Law Appeal.

Sanday Law Appeal.

San Francisco, June 6th.—A circular of appeal for the support of the Sanday law has been agreed upon by the committee of the Sabbath Observance Association, to which the matter of a circular was referred. Several thousands of these circular shave been printed, and all will be sent by mail at once to clergymen and other influential persons in every section of the Stata. The committee was composed of Rev. Dr. Williams, Rev. Otis Gibson and Rev. McCullough. The circular states that the purpose and object of the Association is to promote a general and better observance of the Sabbath, to sustain the present Sunday law of the State and aid its enforcement, and to oppose a repeal of the present Sunday law.

AYER'S FOR ALL THE PURPOSES OF A FAMILY PHYSIC,

Sali Rkeum, Worm, Gout. Neuralgia. as a Dinner Pill. and Purifying the Blood, are the most congenial surgative yet perfected. Their effects abundantly show how much they excel all other Pills. They are safe and pleasant to take, but powerful to cure. hey purge out the foul humors of the blood; they to mulate the sluggish or disordered organs into action, and they impart health and tone to the whole sing. They cure not only the every-day complaints of everybody, but formidable and dangerous diseases. Most skillful physicians, most eminent clergymen, and our best citizens send certificates of cures performed, and of great benefits derived from these Pills. They are the safest and best physic for children, because mild as well as effectual. Being sugar-coated, they are easy to take; and being purely vegetable, they are entirely harmless.
